The New York Times

¶A few weeks ago, the producers of "Mind Games" offered $100,000 to any audience member who could prove that the mentalist Marc Salem used "electronic devices, hidden cameras or unseen assistants" in the show. In response, the company responsible for Monday Night Magic, a weekly magic show at the Sullivan Street Playhouse, has offered a challenge of its own. Any audience member who can prove that Todd Robbins, who will be performing on Jan. 12, does not actually eat glass, hammer nails into his nose or put out a burning cigar on his tongue will be awarded a check for $37.50 and a box of Crackerjacks.
